FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

AROUND THE WORLD, September 26th, 2020 — Internationally, communities are coming together to call for Safe Technology (aka SafeG™), not 5G. From the South Pacific Islands to India, from Australia to Finland, from Uruguay to the Canary Islands, on Saturday, people will peacefully gather to protest the implementation of 5G in their country and skies.

While scientists increasingly issue strong warnings about the harmful effects of wireless radiation, 5G hopes to connect every “thing” and “event” on Earth as part of the internet of things, smart cities and smart regions. To do so will require roughly 100,000 satellites, millions of new cell tower antennas, User Terminals and a plethora of Earth-based Stations blanketing us with ever more wireless radiation, while extracting mega amounts of data on us all.

This fourth Global 5G Protest Day is initiated by Stop 5G International, an aligned group of advocates who join the growing number of people from around the world calling for a stop to 5G, and for the use of safer wired technology such as fiber or cable for most internet and telecommunications needs.

Protesters believe there is too much at stake for our future to be governed by short-term interests of private corporations. Rather we should chart a course into the future that is respectful and protective of all life on Earth.

It is our hope that this day of peaceful actions will bring greater public awareness and will inform politicians around the world about the harms of 5G. The time is long overdue to start a dialogue about wiser technology options for a safer and more life-affirming future for all.
